One of Our Clowns is Missing was staged January 23, 1998 and "Starred" the same year at Minnesota's High School League State One Act Play Festival. “Starred Performance," which is top billing at the state festival, is determined by private balloting of the judges. It is the ultimate honor.
AT RISE:

CLOWNS move in darkness onto boxes around perimeter. Project a Birthday Party video [one minute, 20 seconds] from behind onto a two-way 10’x 10’ screen at upstage center. The RESIDENTS had a birthday party for RANDI complete with costumes, characterization, singing the “Happy Birthday” song, a cake, blowing out candles and opening the gift of a special clown doll. After video freezes on doll, bring up a slow tempo song for one minute, 30 seconds [see Suggested Music]. Bring lights up slowly, CLOWNS on stage become living dolls juggling, dancing, twirling, somersaulting, SAMUEL begins to lead the group home residents in from the back or side of the auditorium while the music plays. CLOWNS notice residents and bid them come. RESIDENTS take their places on same boxes and freeze. CLOWNS are frozen at their side. RANDI, the nurse, comes out and says her monologue.

RANDI: (Holds the special clown doll that she received at her birthday party. She moves from one resident to the other as she speaks.)

To my dearest of friends,

I am needing to leave you.
Where I am going, you cannot come.
It is a special place.
But you cannot come. Not yet.

Please remember me.
Remember the stories.
Remember the songs.
Remember our laughter.

Remember our clowning around.
You were such wonderful clowns.
You were my clowns.
My special clowns.
You brought me joy and lifted my spirit when I was sad.
Please remember me.

You were my heart.
You were my soul.
You were my life.
Please remember me.
I will remember you.

After monologue, lights fade to darkness, entire group exits, lights come up on SANDY at a desk center stage.

SANDY: Dear Mom and Dad, I learned something about myself last night. You now the degree I earned last month in Botany? Well . . . I HATE PLANTS!!!! Well, it is not that I hate them. They just make me nervous. STOP looking at me! I don’t really know what I’m going to do with my life now. Except that I just got a job yesterday as a travel agent. It sounds really fun. But since I’m not really big on fun, I’ll probably quit. Other than that, things are swell. Give a kiss to Grandma. Love always, Sandy.

Telephone rings. Enter SAMUEL to watch SANDY. SAMUEL thinks SANDY has flipped a few screws. He mimics her actions.

SANDY: Oh, hi, Mr. Davidson. How’s it going? It’s just fine except for the plants. What? Oh, it’s nothing. I’m getting used to them. Thank you for hiring me, sir. Yes, I have made reservations for you. Have fun! (Hangs up phone.) The Davidson’s are going to . . . Me-hee-co! (She dances.) Fritos tostados por favor seniorita su casa!!!! La cuca-RAH-CHA! TWEETY: Psssst! Elaine? Mrs. Hahmberger? Psssst! (Hears loud crunch of potato chips. Chips is hiding behind a plant eating chips.) All right! Come out of there. I know how to use this! (She grabs stapler from desk.)

TWEETY: Staple you? Chips, it’s Tweety. It’s only Tweety. Oh, you scared me!

CHIPS: Tweety! I scared you? You scared me!!!! I was just waiting for Elaine.

TWEETY: You were just waiting for Elaine.

CHIPS: Tweety! You’re repeating my last sentences again.

CHIPS: Yes, Tweety. Remember what Dr. Pimpernell said: It is a demonstration of repressed hostility. (Keep eating those chips.)
BY JAY W. PATTERSON

TALLMAN: Thanks, Chips.

TWEETY: So where is Elaine, anyway?

ROLLO: Yeah! What’s the emergency! (Enter SAM.)

SAM: I’ll tell you what the emergency is!

ROLLO: Elaine!

TALLMAN: What’s going on, Cheeseburger?

SAM: I am varning you, Tallman! It’s Hahmberger, not cheeseburger!

TALLMAN: Seriously, folks! Is this guy psycho or what? It’s not like I said sanitarium or something!

TWEETY: What did he say? What did he say?

CHIPS: I think he did. Don’t worry. I won’t tell.
DAPHNE:  Who’s he calling psycho? - he should talk should he should he is some nasty guy he is I’ll tell you if I could . . .

ROLLO:  It’s okay, Daphne. He didn’t mean it.

SAM:  Tallman. Think about this! Do you not want to come to Sur-Bay with us?

CHIPS:  Sur-bay! Where all the trees have leaves in pastels. I heard that potato chips grow right in the ground.

TWEETY:  Right in the ground?
